A vertical strip of ten metal fragments, likely from a broken sword or spearhead, showing various shapes and sizes, some with notches or holes. The fragments are arranged vertically, with the top one being the largest and the bottom one being the smallest. The fragments are dark and appear to be made of metal, with some showing signs of corrosion or wear. The fragments are arranged in a way that suggests they are parts of a single object, possibly a sword or spearhead, that has been broken into pieces. The fragments are shown against a light background, which makes them stand out. The fragments are arranged in a vertical line, with the top one being the largest and the bottom one being the smallest. The fragments are shown in a way that suggests they are parts of a single object, possibly a sword or spearhead, that has been broken into pieces.
